

Instagram's chronological feed is back & LinkedIn tests audio rooms

Get the sauce to your inbox

From the latest on the Instagram algorithm to how you should optimize your YouTube channel in 2022, The SAUCE covers what you need to know to grow and nurture a digital brand. There's no secret method or magical tools, but the ever-evolving strategies and tactics we're trying out might be helpful for growing your business. You'll get all kinds of good stuff: templates, strategy tips, and bookmark-worthy headlines.

SUBSCRIBE

Week of January 10, 2022

the social verse

Instagram's chronological feed is back – TechCrunch

"The non-chronological home feed will feature 'more and more recommendations over time,' functioning more as a discovery hub than a way to keep up on content from people you already follow."

Read More | By Taylor Hatmaker

Facebook's Creator Studio adds new preview features – Matt Navarra, Twitter

Facebook has added a slew of new features to its Creator Studio, including methods via which videos and in-stream content can have previews be generated before being uploaded.

Read More | Matt Navarra

LinkedIn is testing audio feeds, kind of like what ClubHouse is – Social Media Today

“LinkedIn’s launching an initial test of its own, Clubhouse-like audio events platform, which will enable users to tune into live discussions in the app, and participate by raising their virtual hand to join as a speaker.”

Read More | By Andrew Hutchinson

the secret sauce

Free resources, guides, and tutorials to create better content. Nothing sponsored – we only include sources we know and trust.

How to Build an Instagram Sales Funnel That Converts

Read More

A comprehensive guide to optimizing your channel to attract followers

Read More