Instagram could let you run Facebook ads from your IG account

According to Alessandro Paluzzi, Instagram is testing the ability to allow you to show your Ad on Facebook News Feed, Stories Feed, and Video Feed. While it likely won't include all the settings and options available in Ads Manager, this new feature could make it simpler to place Facebook ads directly from the ads you create on Instagram.

New admin features for Facebook Groups

Meta last week announced a slew of new features for Facebook Groups that will make communities easier to manage. Meta said the updates are designed to “help Facebook group admins keep their groups safe and healthy, reduce misinformation, and to make it easier for them to manage and grow their groups with relevant audiences.”

New features through Facebook’s “Admin Assistant” and “Admin Home” include:

- Automatically decline incoming posts that have been identified as containing false information by third-party fact-checkers.
- Automatically decline incoming posts that have been identified as containing false information.
- Expanded functionality of “mute” and “suspend”

- Automatically approve or decline member requests
- New overview page on desktop Admin Home to quickly review things that need attention
- Layout update to more easily sort and search tasks
- Insights summary on mobile to help admins understand growth and engagement

Instagram is finally adding moderators to IG Live streams

It's been a long time coming, and we're personally freaking out. Oh, metaverse, how many countless IG Lives could have been saved if it were for the help of a kind and loving moderator?

IG is finally giving creators the option to have moderators during Live streams. Moderators will have the ability to report comments, remove viewers from the stream, as well as turn off comments for a specific viewer. Here's what it looks like:
